'Sandy' batters East Coast

Comelec lowers boom on Mikey A

By Jocelyn R. Uy

IT'S ALL OVER for the group of Juan Miguel "Mikey" Arroyo, son of former President and now Pangasinan Rep. Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, which claims to represent security guards and bicycle drivers, and an aspiring party-list group of providers.

The Commission on Elections (Comelec) yesterday disqualified Ang Galing Pinoy (AGP) and Anak ng Manananggay (ANM), bringing to 33 the number of party-list groups that had to be dropped from the list of eligible candidates.

6 million without power in region

SUPERSTORM "Sandy" battered the mid-Atlantic region on Monday, its powerful gusts and storm surges causing once-in-a-generation flooding in coastal communities, knocking down trees and power lines, and leaving more than 6.2 million people—including a large swath of Manhattan—in the rain-soaked dark. At least 16 deaths were tied to the storm.

The storm's path and size were made landfall near Atlantic City, New Jersey, around 8 p.m., with sustained winds of about 130 kilometers per hour (80 miles per hour), the National Hurricane

US execs demonstrate strong political will

By TJ Burgenio, Philip C. Talbot and Marlon Ramon

AMERICAN officials showed strong political will by shutting down key transportation systems, schools and offices and evacuating people ahead of onslaught of Superstorm "Sandy." They also had the information to make crucial decisions.

These are the key lessons that Philippine officials could learn from US preparations for Sandy's havoc on the East Coast's major cities.

"That's political will," Tim Lennan, executive director of the Manila Observatory, said of the shutdown of airports, highways, train systems, and even stock markets, and the cancellation of flights, among other precautionary measures.

Lennan singled out New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg for taking the lead in warning residents in low-lying areas of Lower Manhattan to evacuate.

"You really need to be able to see that the mayor is the lead stakeholder. Everybody else needs to take his view," she said by

Former 'sin city' finds new way to honor dead

By Ysabelle Doran, Inquirer Content Liaison

ANGELES CITY—In this bustling urban center, once known as a "sin city" for its rowdy bars that catered to US buyers who were stationed at the air base here, educators and church leaders are seeking to change the concept of commemorating the dead.

During a celebration at Holy Angel University (HAPU) last week, there was no depiction of sin or evil. Instead, "angels" and "saints" dominated a procession for All Saints' Day.

"As the minister of my father's estate, it is my duty to administer the estate's assets properly. Therefore, we will deal with this matter about it is kind in the proper suit," Mayra said in a brief statement yesterday in reaction to the recent decision favoring the claims of human rights victims on the Maroon estate.

Martinez said their family wants closure to the issue of Elgarten's death and hopes justice will be done.

His father, the late dictator Francisco Franco, was president of the country for 31 years, 14 of them under martial rule.

Still, the young States and the family units claims provided an excellent basis for the law.

The US Court of appeals on Oct. 24 ruled in favor of human rights victims during the dictatorship when it upheld a contempt judgment that found the Marcos brothers have violated an injunction that prevented them from dissipating the assets of the state.

Israel, EU seek to invest more in PH, says Binay

By Tere Quintanilla

ISRAEL and the European Union (EU) are looking to increase their investments in the Philippines given the positive global outlook on the country's economy, according to Vice President Jejomar Binay.

Reporting on his visit to Israel and Europe in the last few weeks, Binay said government and business leaders he met with "expressed their admiration for the country's impressive economic growth and its progress in rapid development, innovation and investments."

Binay said Israel will send a trade mission to the Philippines early next year to pursue business partnerships with the Philippine President and the President of the Israeli Chamber of Commerce to share "ideas on how best to promote improved trade and economic relations."

"As a result of that meeting, a large Israeli trade mission will be coming to Manila early next year to facilitate contacts with potential partners," he said.

Binay was in Israel on Oct. 22-28, 2012, and with Israeli President Shimon Peres and Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman.

He said the new officials "expressed high regard and respect for the Philippines' growth of its strong economic performance and its big domestic market based on its young, dynamic and educated population."

Before flying to Israel, Binay went to Brussels, Belgium, where he met with officials and business leaders of the European Union on the sidelines of the European Council summit (page B10) on Oct. 26-27.

GOV'T WATCH

Serving and Protecting the Filipino Consumer

RAUL T. CONCEPCION
Chairman, GOV'T WATCH

TO ATTAIN TRUE & LASTING PROGRESS, WE NEED A TRANSPARENT AND HONEST ELECTORAL SYSTEM

GOV'T WATCH has stated that the greatest legacy that PNoy could leave the Filipinos when he steps down in 2016 is a clean electoral system.

GOV'T WATCH fully supports Commissioner Sikat Brillantes in his endeavor and suggests the following:

1. That COMELEC conduct an audit of voters' lists under the same scrutiny as the audit of new and existing Party List organizations.

2. That COMELEC keep their updated and apprised of any new technology that involves poll automation.

Should new technology become available, COMELEC must be prepared to accept bids, procure, test, and implement in time for the crucial May 2016 Presidential Elections.

3. That COMELEC conduct an audit and participate in the testing of the automated election system, including the components and processes that will be used in 2013.

A RANDOM MANUAL AUDIT (RMA) IN 2013 MUST BE UNDERTAKEN AS MANDATED UNDER SECTION 24 OF RA 9369 (AUTOMATED ELECTION LAW)

The RMA, besides being mandated by law, must be undertaken because of perceived weaknesses in our existing automated election system including improperly reviewed source codes, the possibility of hacking, and hardware/software/human error.

1. RMA must be done immediately after the closing of polls in randomly chosen precincts.
2. The selection of precincts must be transparent and complies with proper sampling techniques.
3. Should discrepancies be encountered, the root cause must be identified.
4. An audit trail must be documented and readily available.

GOV'T WATCH WILL WORK CLOSELY WITH COMELEC AND OTHER SOCIO-CIVIC ORGANIZATIONS, INCLUDING NAMFREL, DURING THE RANDOM MANUAL AUDIT

1. NAMFREL has developed procedures for a comprehensive (pre, during, and post) audit in 2009 and has already conducted a limited RMA in 2010.
2. NAMFREL is a pioneer in citizens-led election monitoring in the world, has influenced the formation of similar groups in 140 countries, and has been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize.

We encourage PNoy and Commissioner Brillantes to forge ahead in this task for it is our strong belief that a transparent, honest, and credible electoral system is crucial in attaining true and lasting progress.

P-Noy honors IPs

By TJ Burgin

PRESIDENT Aquino yesterday honored the indigenous people (IP) for their role in the country's fight against terrorism, by admitting his administration had been slow in recognizing their domestic efforts.

The President said that many Filipinos ignored the role of the IP in the country's fight against terrorism. He said that the IP had been "in the front lines" of the fight against terrorism, but they had been "overlooked" by the government.

"It seems that many, especially the youth, have forgotten that our IP have part of our armed forces of the last Republic. They had come down to help defend our country against the subversion," he said in a speech marking the 20th anniversary of the Indigenous Peoples Rights Act.

As for the country's leaders, Mr. Aquino said it was his job to ensure that all Filipinos receive the IP's recognition.

"We do President, and above all, as your fellow Filipinos, my duty will remain open to your suggestions for the lifting of our people to the state of the welfare of our IP," he said at the Government Center for Indigenous Peoples Building in Quezon City. His speech was held over a private event.

Aquino said the government should ensure that the IP were included in the making of laws and decisions making process at the local level.

As persons, more than 900 IP are members of local legislative councils, he said.

In terms of education of indigenous children, the President admitted that his administration has not been good at only a few, compared with previous administrations.

From 1995 to present, a total of 200 scholarships had been granted, including PIA, GIC, and other scholarships, he said.

So the public may know.....

Last June 14, 2005, the Advertising Board of the Philippines, Inc. (ABP) declared that AMA Education Systems (MAES) is the "Philippines' Largest Network of Colleges" upholding its earlier Decision dated May 12, 2005.

Hence, AMA Education System is the only educational institution that can rightfully make this claim among all other existing schools in the Philippines. Likewise, all advertising, PR and other materials which make this claim are to be considered to be misleading and erroneous airings, display and publication.

To willfully cause such publications would tend to mislead the public of the real status of the institutions.

Last September 8, 2005, the ABP ruled and upheld its June 14, 2005 Decision of Hearing Panel whereby it was ruled that the claim of STI Colleges, Inc. (STI) to be the "Largest Network of Colleges in the Country" was without factual and legal basis and thus, a violation of the Code of Ethics for advertising. The ABP found that STI's claim was false and confusingly or misleadingly distorted as exaggerated.

We stipulate that all media which includes among others, TV, radio, print and social media, deny the publication of such a claim for and in behalf of STI.

MAES reserves its right to file any and all actions against any individual, group of persons and/or associations who willfully violate the above ruling.

Literally packed, the hards' chert-by-jowl discourses and the sheer absence of sanitation facilities give rise to, and nurture, a collective defiance among the residents. The crude shacks become home, where they raise their (many) children and from where they sally forth to earn a living.

On occasions where their lives are disrupted, such as by fire or by demolitions, the odds and ends of their existence are laid bare to "forward and meet" ours in a some what Stakhanovite manner. Few better stories could be acquired than the wild-eyed account given by one man about the inferno, the death of his wife, the burning house. Or the story told by a woman in a thin white suit, standing at a TV camera's intensive eye, who reports staff common to middle class house hold, including refrigerators and the occasional plastic infection, suggesting what they are called "professional squatters," that their mother story! At least a couple of demolition scenarios—on North Avenue in Queens City and in the Guggenheim area in Madrid—erick in the mind's eye: (naming battles between the midwest and the local government, and society by live soldiers, marked by the demolition remains, and the other, perhaps, a small carroll ball near gas bottles and a shooting tank in front of the harbor.

The Merit Housing Development Authority estimates that in the metropolitan area, more than 500,000 families live in shanty towns, and more than 200,000 and around 175,000 occupy government lands and private lands, respectively, according to an homenet special report by Charles Belding published on Oct. 6 and 13. Subdivisions and Housing Development Association chair Manuel Cricomonte cannot the value of these families: "We should recognize and help [them] because the majority of them live in Merit Manila, meaning that the needs of the higher-income families are met. They work in factories, construction sites and even in dumpsites, do a variety of home-based enterprises, or work as domestic servants, security guards or street vendors." He pointed out that helping these families acquire decent housing would assist the government in meeting a key clause in industrial Strangers in General: This, Gavine, where, in another USGS special report that was not on Oct. 29, Maurice Chon wrote of 180 strath-typo houses that annual reports are going to send. (A photograph of a row of the strath-typo houses is shown in the report.) The houses are strath-typo houses, as well as an old strath-typo house—a row and in half built along by a row. The housing project was intended for 2,100 houses and workers who would be displaced by the construction of the planned 11.7-kilometer extension of the Light Rail Transit (LRT) project, which is now under construction. Gavine. As early as 2006, the previous administration of Gavine evaluated on the project with the LRT and proceeded to build the housing units. 180 were completed although, as recently announced by Pemslaw. Apart from the construction of the planned LRT extension, the project is embroiled in a financial mess, with each 22-square-meter unit built on a strath-typo row for $2.8 million each. The scheme is not affordable and has many various other problems in this country of your coastal province. The report on the project is a recent development and is not yet published. LRTA 2009.

Details such as interrupted housing units continually close to rain (no matter that, as in other locations, areas they still lack electricity and water connections) acquire a hard-edged irony given the families that have huddled sweltering places on the banks of waterways, under and in the overpasses of bridges, and other unlikely nooks and crannies. These details show how slowly we have traveled on the road to progress when, as Manuel Cisneros so wistfully dreams it, "slums of despair" become "slums of hope."

Our bursting public cemeteries

TOUCHING BEING: All kinds: They, it is lovely to discuss a frequent complaint of mine: the loss of the power of their "good sense" when they go to the cemetery, as the day of the dead approaches. Spiders, holes and pain, or white, ash, white, they go to the site of the tomb of their relatives to do so and pain them and find, to their surprise, somebody else's tomb there. They look around the ruins. Andrew

The reason, more likely, is that they forget to pay the poultry rent for the site to the local government when it quietly and happily assumes the bones of their loved ones so that the graves

So, they should have been the case, but LISA chose not to explain them on the grounds because then they would have to remove or replace the old glove with a new one. They are only too glad to dig out old towels for new occupants, with the obvious caveat.

In fact, they prefer that more people fail to pay the rent for the games of their relatives. Why? Because all our public resources are hopelessly overextended. Every day people are doing less than the owner of the supermarket before the owner. They do not expand. There is simply too much money in the land for supermarkets, and it is the best thing; because the old supermarket games to make space for the new.

Despite the growing popularity of memorial parks, monuments and tributes, the public is prone to bury their loved ones in public cemeteries because memorial parks and

Because of this, public cemeteries have reached their maximum points and are no longer a viable option. Still, people keep dying, so where do we put them?

But is a problem that is growing worse every day, but which both the national and local governments have not bothered to solve. They would rather ignore the problem like the dead, and forget about it. But they cannot forget because every day more people go to the city or municipal hall to complain about their missing yards. What happened? Where are the leaders of their local areas?

Finally, I can put the bones from each group together with the same of the deceased on it as if they were alive, and claim that they are. They would be able to return the remains to their families. The bones of the 100,000 people in the internment camps, they are dumped together in one place, their identities gone. So when the Japanese come to claim them, the people in charge of the ceremonies merely pick up a bag and say that is the one. Most of the time, the bones belong to a stranger, but there is almost no way to determine that in most Philippine cemeteries. The bones to take the most of the ceremonies are those of the Japanese.

In the statements I hear with their bag of bones, I agree that they have found the remains of their loved ones so that they can be buried in another, more secure grounds.

And that doesn't solve the problem of overcrowding in public universities. Some LAFU have tried to solve it by putting up residential units of tenets, one on top of another, along the perimeter walls of public universities. But even that is not enough. People are dying to get into universities that new condos can be built on them. Along with the booming population,

One way to communicate, if dead person's sake is not to be accommodated in one small space which can then be deposited in less than a square inch of space in a columbarium. On the one can help in the family altar, being taken into practice to spread the ashes at sea or by an. Others prefer to spread them around the roots and trunk of a favorite tree. So that the loved one will forever be a part of the tree, they say, and keep watch over them. Or spread on the lawn and twirl it, so that when they walk barefoot on the grass, they would be touching the remains of their loved ones.

But that does not solve the problem. Since all the means have to learn to spread the message, at a certain time individuals, instead of just, they cannot even afford the cost of creating them. The correct solution is to expand our public commitment to create new means to overcome all those people leaving the crowded world. Paradoxically, while they decrease the population of the living, they also increase the population of the dead.

Expanding public ownership in creating new units is better said than done, however. Private land is decreasing rapidly sold by the private government, national and local, to equally private land developers. Even land that should be set aside for parks are being sold to the private sector to be sold again.

The conclusion of the study should have our public officials as that they would pay attention to their more than they do to their own private pockets.

Filipino nation on the rise

THE RECENT construction of Taylor International Airport and the upcoming elevation of Manila Archbishop Luis Antonio Tagle to the rank of cardinal in the Holy See will dramatically improve the image of the Philippines in the eyes of the international community. As one of the only non-Christian countries in the Global South (and in the select east), the Philippines, lately, has been reaping positive news and reviews in international media. This augurs well for the Philippines and for the Filipino people, especially overseas Filipinos.

In this light, our political leaders should refrain from any more punishing laws and decrees and serve the Filipino people with justice, integrity and honesty, unless what they let's sleep the common sense going!

Cebu City stops work on 10-story building

By Princess Napalitan
Inquirer Vigan

CEBU CITY—The city government suspended an ongoing construction of a 10-story building on the premises owned by the Housing Dept. this early afternoon as a protest of the halt of the old city jail redevelopment project.

A portion of the 20-meter high wall of the Bagong Buhay Rehabilitation Center collapsed, damaging five houses in an adjacent area, according to Ramon Aguirre, chief of town planning.

But it prompted the city government to order the suspension of the construction of a building in the area, according to Aguirre.

The 10-story building is being put up by the City of Cebu Land Inc. (CCLI) on a portion of a 1.2-hectare lot owned by the City's protected government.

In a statement, CCCL said only a small portion of the old jail wall collapsed. "The contractor should have advised the city of the condition of the existing perimeter wall."

5 dead, 22 wounded as bus slams into boulder

ORANG CITY—At least five persons were killed while at least 22 others were wounded when a bus crashed into a boulder on a road leading into a school in the Island Capital of Sarawak on Tuesday.

Amos Bhatia, chief of the City Librarian and Risk Reduction Management of Ipoh, said the Island Express bus was carrying more than 22 passengers and was maneuvering a hill in the village of Ipoh when it met the accident at around 10 a.m.

Bhatia said police, though, are still investigating the accident. He said the bus was going down the hill, forcing the driver to slam the vehicle into a roadside boulder to avoid plunging into the river.

Among those killed were the bus driver.

Sarawak is a popular tourist destination because of its prime beaches but Bhatia said the victims were all students of the local school.

Celebrating indigenous wisdom and knowledge

By Mauricio Millanes
Bogotá City

A STORY was told about a team of city-based researchers who wanted to know how the Aeta people were coping after Mount Pinatubo erupted in 1991. After an hour of uphill trek, the researchers, along with a tribal elder as guide, reached upon some wild game trees with ripe fruits.

Instead of what they saw, they stepped and had a field day reaching on the ripe grapes. After they had them fill, they harvested them, filling their pockets and bags. To their surprise, however, the Aeta guide picked only enough to eat.

When they asked why he only took a little, the elder said: "There would be many children passing through this trail so it would be good to leave some for them."

Often told and retold in many corners, the story has become a classic illustration of indigenous wisdom, which is usually cited during the celebration of the Indigenous Peoples Month every October and in some families delivered by poems and gestures.

It has become a metaphor for two different perspectives—one represented by the notion of "enough" (and their Pinoy stand) researchers and the other represented by the "unconscious" guide, who has learned and kept the wisdom of his ancestors.

The first is based on consuming and satisfying more than what one needs, while the other is based on knowing one's basic needs and leaving a large concern for others, including those of the next generation. The latter perspective is largely cultural or a way of life, which is deeply rooted in indigenous people's belief and value system.

Principle of 'enough'

In June, anthropologist Karen de Lima and her husband, filmmaker Rafael Tabares, convened an international conference in Baguio City, which brought together a number of 25 indigenous groups from around the Philippines and guests from other countries, like American Indians, Kanakas from Thailand and Africa from Caribbean region.

It was the first conference that the people organized since 2006. The participants not only celebrated their nationalities but also highlighted their commonalities in wisdom and philosophy.

For example, in various roles "good-enough-for-my-ancestors" model, the indigenous people stressed the principle of "enough." Through epics and stories, they highlighted the wisdom of leaving something for the coming generations as opposed to "maximizing production" preached by many corporations.

Not having programs or setting clear or wild pigs, or allowing an all season, the Aeta were among the many stories shared during the conference.

The meeting also became a venue for Filipino academics, many of whom took postgraduate studies in the United States, to pay tribute to their indigenous brothers and sisters for maintaining their role as keepers of the traditional wisdom of their ancestors.

One human participant from Pangasinan even made an emotional public apology to the Aeta community (owing to their "colonial education," she admitted their indifference and unwillingly, she was part of the white process that disenfranchised the Aeta people from their ancestral domain, which, she said, included the once US-controlled Subic Bay Naval Base in Zambales and Clark Air Base in Pangasinan).

Recently Tabares told he was asked by Department of Education (DepEd) officials to help them work out the integration of "values of Aeta wisdom" into the public school system. The schools are community-based institutions where indigenous people learn from their elders important values and principles, along with epics, rituals, belief systems, songs, dances and crafts.

While long overdue, Tabares welcomed the DepEd's efforts to integrate indigenous knowledge and recognition of local languages in instruction media.

"(There may yet help) repair the damage brought about by our colonial education," he said. "It is time we stop marginalizing indigenous knowledge."

HIV cases rise in 'MSM-friendly' QC

City health office reports 266 infections in Jan-Aug period

By Rina Josemaria H. Gual

"GAYS consider Quezon City MSM-friendly."

A local health official made that observation in the trend to explain the alarming number of HIV/AIDS cases in the city which reportedly affects a lot of "brave, strong" or "strong" men.

The proliferation of so-called "strong" men—men who living are with men—has made the city a high risk area for contracting the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) which causes acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS), according to Dr. Jose Gual, a coordinator for a program dealing with HIV/AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases under the Quezon City Health Department.

Gual said that the 266 HIV/AIDS cases were reported in the city from January to August this year. Of this number, 162 involved gay men who said they had engaged in "very risky" sexual relations, Gual said.

During the same period last year, a total of 361 cases were reported in the city.

The Department of Health under Mayor Jejomar Binay said Quezon City is one of the cities with the highest incidence of HIV/AIDS cases in the country. The other five are Manila, Pasig, Marikina, Cebu, and Davao.

Gual said that the increase in cases was due to the fact that the city is a "very risky" area for contracting the virus. He said that the city is a "very risky" area for contracting the virus because of the high number of gay men who are engaged in "very risky" sexual relations.

The increase in cases is also due to the fact that the city is a "very risky" area for contracting the virus because of the high number of gay men who are engaged in "very risky" sexual relations.

FILIPINO consumers continue to have one of the highest confidence levels to spend in the third quarter of the year among respondents of 58 countries surveyed by media research firm Nielsen.

Despite this, the latest results of the Consumer Confidence Index showed that spending remained "restrained" and that eating was the top priority for those surveyed.

Just like in the previous quarter, the Philippines' real confidence index, Nielsen's domestic and global, in consumer confidence levels, with a score of 1.01, up from 1.12 in the same quarter last year.

"This paints a positive picture for the third quarter of 2012," Philip's Philippines managing director Stuart Jamieson said in a statement. "The high confidence can be attributed to the positive perception regarding local job prospects in the months for the last 12 months, which at this point are second highest worldwide."

He added that "improving plans in the energy transportation, telecom industries and largely the BPOs business process outsourcing, are helping to create this positive perception in local consumers."

The Nielsen global survey of consumer confidence and spending intentions, established in 2003, measures consumer confidence, major concerns and spending intentions among more than 25,000 Internet consumers in 58 countries. Consumers use a three-level index above and below a baseline of 100 to indicate degrees of optimism and pessimism.

The study also showed that Filipino online consumers felt positively about the state of their personal finances, ranking second among the most optimistic about

Meralco eyes power plant project in Vietnam

By Amy R. Rios

MANILA (Business) — The country's biggest power distributor is planning to go into the power generation business in Vietnam as part of its long-term plan to expand its operations abroad.

Although only preliminary talks were underway, Meralco chair Manuel V. Pangalanan told reporters on Monday that they have yet to firm up their assessment of the potential

'Significant minority interest' in foreign venture

Vietnam market.

"I think we'll take modest steps in Vietnam. Of course the numbers have to work for us, as well as the need, we have no clue as to what numbers will work. But the arrangements seem to be quite reasonable because the power will be bought by the government through EVN (Vietnam Electricity)," Pangalanan explained.

He added that initially Meralco was looking at projects that would merge ownership from a minimum of 15% (Singapore) (MNC) to 60% (Philippines). Preferably, the distribution will mostly want to have a "significant minority interest" in the partnership.

That may be formed with prospective Vietnamese partners.

"Why minority? We don't have the kind experience of some firms, even operators in Vietnam, especially in the regulatory aspects. It's a better to take certain baby steps first," Pangalanan said.

Meralco president and CEO Oscar B. Reyes had said that Meralco was looking at potential projects even outside the Philippines to enhance the company's profitability and showcase the technical competency of its engineers, technical and related service people.

Locally, Meralco, through its power-generation arm Meralco Power

Gen, is building a 1,700-MW peat-briquette wood-coal-fired 1,200 MW of coal-fired facilities and 1,500 MW of natural gas-fired power plants.

The first 600-MW coal-firing is being put up at the Bataan Bay Freeport in partnership with Asian Power Corp. and Spanish conglomerate, Iberdrola, a subsidiary company called Iberdrola Peninsular Energy (IPE).

The $2.2-billion Bataan facility is scheduled to start construction in 2013. Development services are continuing as the company hopes to operate the first 300-MW plant by the first half of 2015.

Microsoft launches Windows 8 in PH

By Paolo C. Manalillo

CORPORATE giant Microsoft has launched its new flagship operating system (OS) in emerging markets around the world, including the Philippines, to begin the ground it has to make devices that have become more popular among consumers.

The local launch of Windows 8, as well as device running on the same platform, comes just days after the OS was unveiled in New York City.

"We are launching a product that will respond to the needs of today's users and avoid where the lines between tablet and ultra-thin PC have disappeared," Microsoft Philippines managing director Gene Capellan Ensign said.

"Windows 8 is the most robust, reviewed and ready-to-go Microsoft's latest," Ensign said, detailing the new software as the "best" operating system released by the global, the company responsible for the global boom in personal computing.

The new Windows 8 OS is aimed for traditional desktop and laptop computers, tablet devices and mobile phones. This can be linked to the gap between PCs and tablet mobile devices that more consumers are moving to buy.

consumers are moving to buy.

Microsoft's OS new hardware or "OS." The traditional desktop system with a tablet and "best" feature in the bottom area is replaced with a new "start" button. In addition, Ensign said users would have to "get what they know" about using Microsoft Windows using the new OS.

Ensign said device running on Windows 8 offers consumers the same computing power and functionality expected from traditional PCs. "We have a platform that can eventually and effectively bridge the gap between PCs, laptops, tablets and mobile phones. It's a new, all-in-one computing experience for all," she said.

During this week, hardware vendors like Acer, Asus, Dell, HP, Lenovo, Samsung, Sony and Toshiba will be selling PCs and tablet computers running on Windows 8, which replaces the Windows 7 OS, the company's last selling platform in data.

Also launched yesterday was second OS application software aimed at making Windows 8 devices more relevant to Philippine consumers. Among those "apps" was the new "My Market" by the Market City Corporation. This feature news, weather and traffic information in Manila City.

The Manila Manila Development Authority (MMDA) also launched a version of its popular Traffic Navigator (TNM) app for Windows 8. The TNM is already pre-installed on Apple's iPhone and Google's Android platforms.

their personal finances in December.

For the third quarter of 2012, perceptions of Philippine consumers whether it was a good or a bad time to buy things that they wanted and needed were the next 12 months showed a slight improvement in confidence with 7 percent saying that it was an excellent time to do so as compared to 6 percent a year ago. They also saw promise of the respondents and that it was a good time to buy compared to 42 percent in the third quarter of 2011.

When there was good cash available in the household, 67 percent of Philippine respondents said they would rather put the cash in savings, while 34 percent would buy new technology products, while 34 percent would purchase new clothes while 34 percent would pay off credit cards or loans, and 27 percent would spend it on holiday or vacation.

"The Philippines is among the top 10 countries which positive savings when there is spare cash in the household," Manalillo said.

Among the major concerns of those polled over the next six months, job security remained at the top of the list as it did in the same quarter last year. It was followed by work-life balance, health, welfare and happiness of patients, and education and welfare of children.

"This is a true mirror of the Filipino culture, which is very family-oriented on the family," the Nielsen chief said. "These two major concerns are all related to the family: whether it is for parents or children's welfare. If you look at it worldwide, the Philippines is number one among the top 10 countries who said that they are concerned about their parents' well-being and happiness."

In the third quarter of last year, Philippine consumers about the country was part of the top five countries in the world, it ranked number six.

While consumer sentiment increased over percentage points in the Asia-Pacific to 12 percent, Filipino sentiment to avoid the economic state of the Philippines improved with 56 percent. This was a big difference compared to Korea and Taiwan respondents with 48 percent of whom were of the opinion that they were in a recession.

The report shows that it was on household expenses, Filipino have lowered their expenses on new clothes, eating on gas and electricity, delaying their upgrade on technology like computers and mobile devices, switching to cheaper grocery brands and cutting down on take-away meals. Overall economic conditions improve, the respondents said that they will continue doing these activities.

Here lie the racing legends, quiet and still

by Tessa H. Salazar

IN LIFE, as it is in a race, there's a beginning and an end. The scholars of racing champions, and the writers of their obituaries, tell us that never call them legends until they're dead. Indeed, their legacy lives on. But when the very word of their racing spirit is gone, as all mortals eventually have to, their earthly remains will have to be laid to rest in a place far removed from the track, in a quiet environment they lived and thrived in.

And where that happens, they do necessarily have to spend eternity without their company, looking after them from time to time.

We call them legends, but if our dead could speak, they might as well call their caregivers. They make a living taking care of the dead, and they have grown used to the sight of odd costumes including the mannequin one just at the dead, but of mortals' power or brain. The caretakers do their work of the crypts everyday, rain or shine. There are no noisy crowds, no cheering shouts, no camera or flashes. There's only the chirping of the birds, the cool breath, and the rustle of leaves being swept into a clump. The caretakers, by virtue of the length of their service, have become members of the extended family of the deceased. And in a Christian society that values its dead, and holds their final resting grounds sacred, the caretakers do hold their invaluable task of keeping the grounds clean.

Because Manning visited the graves of the country's racing legends, and were met by their caretakers like those welcoming visitors at a home.

TV host Nelson is new Kia brand ambassador

By Charles E. Beben

TV host and model Marc Nelson is now the new face of Kia. In an endorsement deal with Colombian Autosport Corp., exclusive distributor of the Korean brand in the Philippines, Nelson will be featured in various media campaigns that promote the upcoming Niro SE.

"We're very pleased to have Marc as our newest endorser," said GAC president Gloria Dominguez during the contract signing. "He's only this month. After being a prominent TV personality, his passion for sports fits very well with Kia's image. We've always believed that sport is not just for the young but also for the young at heart, which is really what the brand is all about. We believe Marc Nelson embodies that perfectly so he was the best choice as the new Niro's ambassador."

The new Niro SE sports a host of significant improvements including a fresh new exterior look, enhanced performance, improved fuel economy and refinement, additional convenience and safety features.

The Niro SE is expected to arrive in the Philippines in early 2013.

Information between the new Niro SE and Nelson.

Nelson will be featured in the new Kia Niro SE and Niro SE advertisement, as well as in print advertisements. He is also set to participate in various activities through online platforms like Facebook and Twitter.

Moreover, expect Nelson to be seen in Kia events over the duration of his endorsement.

Backed

"This really started with this partnership," said Nelson who stated he has been a proud owner of a Kia Niro SE since before he was endorsed. "It's happy to be officially part of the Kia family. I have the brand and when it comes to the Niro SE, it's just a matter of time."

With annual revenues of over $20 billion, Kia has been a major sponsor of the International Olympic Committee since its partnership with the 2010 World Cup. The Niro SE is the latest addition to the Kia Motors Corp.'s lineup of vehicles. The Niro SE is a compact car that is designed to be a sporty, efficient, and eco-friendly vehicle.

NELSON checks out the new Kia Niro SE at a media brief in Manila recently.

Trend to AWD SUVs favors Subaru

DISCOVERY.—The growing popularity of off-road cars means sport utility vehicles with all-wheel drive (AWD) is proving to be a bonanza for the Motor Image Group, the authorized distributor of Italian cars, due to the Suzuki, Nissan, Volvo, Mercedes and Land Rover lines.

During a chat with Philippine media at the venue of the 10th Subaru Challenge in this city state, Motor Image Group president Glenn Tan said that the Philippines is one of Japan's biggest markets among the seven countries with projected sales of $250 million this year. Motor Image (Philippines) currently holds a 60-percent share in an estimated industry sales.

In the Philippine automotive press, almost all SUVs and sport cars are buyers switching from passenger sedans to SUVs. The surge in sales of compact SUVs, also, encourages SUVs to be introduced to the challenging conditions of Philippine roads. Inquiries from consumers by e-mail, telephone, and face-to-face discussions and the advantages of versatility, portability, durability, fuel efficiency, more interior room, higher ground clearance and on-road riding comfort offered by customer car-based SUVs like the Subaru XV.

Launched on the Philippine market earlier this year, the five-door, seven-passenger premium classed XV has become the bestselling Subaru model, as much as that buyers have to wait 80 months for delivery. Tan said he had just received the night before from Japan, where he went to ask that theory be disputed. But, the manufacturers of Italian vehicles, for a larger SUV allocation. The XV has become it has everything that other compact SUVs have plus something they don't have: Italian's trademark historical by-capped front engine and boxer-laid 400-hp, 2.5-liter.

Then, as Subaru's customer guarantee superb handling, driving pleasure and robustness in every Italian market. In Japan, participating a region of houses for the XV Motor Image has formed a partnership with the Italian automotive division of Fiat (Italy) Industries to introduce the XV to Malaysia. The right-hand drive 1.6-liter XV for marketing and distribution in Malaysia, Thailand and Indonesia. The company will start the XV launch, with a target of 10,000 units a year which can be ramped up to 15,000 units annually when demand exceeds supply. Motor Image president said he would be left behind if the XV is not in the market.

The increasing popularity of SUVs continues to purchase the Subaru XV. The first XV was sold in the Philippines for P1,000,000 and the 1.6-liter turbo Premier STi for P1,300,000. Goodrich is fit, more supply cannot meet demand. Tan said the price of the XV is P1,000,000. I don't mind buying more if I can keep customers happy and lead to the Subaru brand," he said. The all-new XV4 Premier is due to arrive next year with more features and a higher retail price.

Despite the local market's SUVs, Tan said that Italian manufacturers care like the Bentley and the Bentley are very competitive in the SUV segment. For driving enthusiasts, there are the 400-hp sports sedan and the four-cylinder 400-hp sports car, the Bentley Continental GT. The Bentley is powered by Bentley's new 2.0-liter, 197-hp by Bentley engine. The Bentley is the first to have both front and rear-wheel drive.

But while the Bentley is being marketed as a sports car, it is perfect for both and even more sports like the Bentley. The Bentley is perfect for both and even more sports like the Bentley. The Bentley is perfect for both and even more sports like the Bentley.

Having 36 offices at the corner of 24th Avenue and Lincoln Street just across I-25, the Andrews Corporation, 1400 24th Avenue, Suite 100, is a 2,700 sq-ft property with office space, storage and parking. It serves as well as a community room, meeting room. The property priced from $12.5 million to $15.5 million.

Students, ignored until the storm mounted at the U.S.S. and rapidly collapsed as well as many politicians' doubts, had the opportunity to be part of the month's understanding of one of the country's most serious and sensitive race issues. "Students did the Community Movement," said the author.

Seat of Prosperity

By Rafael P. Gomez

GREENHILLS Shopping Center, which occupies 18 hectares of property along Delgado Avenue in San Juan, is considered among the oldest shopping centers in the country.

Originally founded as a community shopping area, the Greenhills Shopping Center has been known for nearly four decades and has become the popular shopping destination for people looking for quality designer finds, fashion finds, bags and shoes, jewelry and accessories, toys and gifts, and a whole lot more experiences beyond shopping.

"Shoppers and locals flock to this shopping center popularly known as 'Verdehills' not only to shop but also to indulge in food trip, enjoy movies and theaters, engage in fun activities such as bowling, and even exercise, their faith in the place becomes a chapel and a Mecca for many more."

Recently, the shopping center has been undergoing a massive overhaul to make the consumer shopping experience greater, expansive and accessible and yet still create a feel of a community gathering place, which Greenhills has been known for.

The redevelopment plan

Developer Ortega & Co. is pouring P25-billion in the Greenhills Shopping Center's redevelopment plan, which aims to make Greenhills a shopping, life, work, and play environment. The redevelopment plan also includes the building of a 25-story luxury residential condominium, 70 flats in Verdehills.

"The redevelopment plan calls for bringing back the community gathering place that has been associated with Greenhills and want this experience to be pronounced for those who will leave in the future of Verdehills and old Verdehills homes," said Jose Antonio, general manager of the real estate division of Ortega & Co.

The redevelopment plan calls for the doubling of the shopping space that will expand the "larger" shopping area, while allowing for a wider range of well-known fashion and lifestyle brands. The improvements will also include improvements in the entertainment center, which will include additional dining options, as well as more state-of-the-art cinema, which will showcase the latest in digital technology.

The reimagined Greenhills Shopping Center also includes a bigger Lifestyle Mall. The former Cinema complex converted into a new location for Marvel films from Clark Filipinos, Inc. In addition to existing business and services, it is now made possible with including services, updated facilities and entertainment areas, improving themselves, and a good social experience.

The area also boasts of a new Japanese film festival theater, which is fast becoming a first destination of corporate people and businessmen.

More parking spaces

Parking areas have also been increased with the construction of a new one-level parking below the center Greenhills Shopping Center that not only increases considerably volume of the shopping district, but also ease traffic in the area. Shoppers can now use the two-level parking under the Glass Bridge, the first phase of the parking project that has already been finished.

"Greenhills continues and promises a vibrant life to the community a small and convenient but the area is the foundation of an urban environment and culture, influences and values," said Jose Antonio.

The reimagined Greenhills redevelopment plan is the Mission, the first premium residential center project of Ortega & Co. and the first luxury residential tower to be built in the heart of San Juan.

flats, two retail floors, and two levels of basement parking. With a target date of completion in 2016, the low-density Verdehills is a reimagining and making better than its name in first-class amenities and historic magnificent views of the former Philippine capital and the Ortega family.

In addition to better living in office, Verdehills also provided its residents with some better views in the "Belly of the Dragon," or what the Chinese tradition is a lot of prosperity.

"We envision Verdehills as a premium residential address in San Juan. It is a reimagining, including, and it is reimagining your mind. We have been willing to bet that there are going to be a lot of new faces with Verdehills' expert services and great service," said Jose Antonio.

Dobie Aranda makes the jump from fashion to furniture

The former Kirel designer finds new inspiration in modernizing vintage pieces

By Hugo C. Enriquez
Contributor

WHEN RODOLFO "Dobie" Aranda was still a full-time fashion designer, he would frequently visit a furniture store to admire a pair of curvaceous chairs with steel legs. With his budget, he found the price tag of P17,000 prohibitive.

One day, the chairs were on sale for P5,000. Upon buying them, he told his partner to simplify their framework and change the aesthetic appearance from vintage motifs. When the chairs saw the lightbulb, she immediately snapped the chairs up.

"Then I came out to 'Urban Zone' and to other TV programs," says Aranda. "While Whatever happened to 'patintero'?

By Naomi M. Parnassowicz

DOES your child's schedule include late bed time, screen time, and school, but not much time for the game of 'patintero'?

Not so long ago, parents fill their child's day with outdoor activities and 'patintero', keeping them busy for the hours to their child's bedtime. Child experts, however, say that parents may be forgetting a major part of raising a child.

Over the days when after school, kids would not outside and play patintero in the yard or on the street, children's time are mostly spent indoors.

In the study "The Investigation of the Status of Outdoor Play (2004)," by Dr. Rhonda Clements of Hobbs University in the US, over 800 students were surveyed, and the results found that children in the early 2000s, as compared to those of a generation ago, spend less time playing outdoors and participate in more indoor time outdoor play activities.

Although parents who joined the survey acknowledge the value of Experts agree that video games and too much homework are killing the idea of free and outdoor play for children, and depriving them of valuable lessons on life, cooperation, and even social equality.

Outdoor play, the study revealed, the activities which prevent kids from playing outdoors include television, computers, and excessive school stress, safety and safety.

"When I was a kid, my main goal in life was to look like the perfect powder soap in one with grandma flower in order to produce the biggest bubble and to keep the cucumber a secret from my friends. My brother had a few candy barbed full of stones which he really thought were precious gems. Kids today are busy with gadgets that in their games with virtual pets or games which involve virtually

In Dr. Gershberg's publication in Children's Hospital of Philadelphia and author of "Building Resilience in Children and Teens: Giving Kids Stress and Worry," also wrote that play is under threat from other things we don't do, such as more schoolwork and homework, more screen time, and adult-directed programs in order to mind the clip of reading and competition.

In this context, this play is considered just for the sake of being and is "self-achievement."

Having been a lover of elementary students for many years, Gershberg observes that kids today "have very little or almost no time to play on weekends." Play time

MAMA DIARIES

It may feel almost routine due to the number of people you know who have had it, but the fact is, it is a major operation.

I WAS 2005. I was due to give birth, but I was already in my 40th week. I walked, or rather waddled, into my OB's office, curious to find out if my daughter had any plans of moving out of my uterus.

" Nope, she's still too high. Maybe next week." Another week of pregnancy? Actually I didn't want to know what I wanted. On one hand, I could not wait to meet my first born, and on the other hand, I was happy to have a little extension because life any time soon, I was nervous about labor and how to take control of a baby!

"What about this?" Her word is in the wrong place.

SEN. LOREN CELEBRATES OUR IP ARTISTRY WITH KULTURA

"We started with indigenous people about our faith, when I was still a freshman senator," says Senator Loren Legarda. She has become the voice of indigenous peoples in the Philippines. "I believed in our cultural traditions, their way of life, their struggles and aspirations."

She discovered that "there are five indigenous peoples in the Philippines: the Ilonggo, the Bagobos, the Mangyans, the Igorots, and the Hanunoyans. Each has its own language, culture, and way of life."

These indigenous peoples are still in a state of poverty and marginalization. She decided to help them by creating a series of products that would help them to improve their lives.

In the 1990s, Legarda, who is now a Senator, started the Kultura Foundation. It is a non-profit organization that helps indigenous peoples to improve their lives. It does this by creating a series of products that would help them to improve their lives.

In 2001, she successfully organized an indigenous peoples' congress in Baguio City. She is now the chair of the Senate Committee on Cultural Communities.

In 2002, she introduced the country's first indigenous peoples' bill. It is a bill that would give indigenous peoples the right to self-determine their political status.

In 2003, she introduced the country's first indigenous peoples' bill. It is a bill that would give indigenous peoples the right to self-determine their political status.
